Shipmates,

Fall has arrived. Warm days and cool evenings will soon turn the landscape into a kaleidoscope of colors. It is one of my favorite times of the year here in Maryland. Also at this time of the year, we start planning for the upcoming holidays. This year, however, the virus has affected many of the company functions we planned on hosting. Most recently, we adjusted our plans for the longevity awards. Instead of a group function, we altered the presentation of the awards on an individual basis. We started that evolution this past Monday and will continue the individual presentations in the AMEWAS conference room for the next two weeks.

We anticipate the virus will also impact the year-end Christmas party, and as such, we have decided to cancel this special event in consideration of the health and safety of our employees and their guests. I am personally very disappointed concerning this issue since it is one of the only functions where AMEWAS can show our appreciation and all get together as a company to socialize, dine and celebrate a very special time of year.

Our HR staff has been working on some other ideas to show our appreciation. Next week they will formalize those ideas. Please keep a close eye on your U.S. mail, as information will be sent out to each employee at your private residence.

Warmest Regards,

Chuck Jeffries
